Excerpt: . . . punish the offenders, was fearfully summary. The whole of the ChapelgorrU were this morning marched a few miles on the Miranda road, and, without being in the slightest degree aware of what was in preparation, were ordered to ascend a rising ground, --the same where the French batteries were planted which did so much execution during the advance upon Villora by Lord Wellingtons army. Here they found a body of OOO infantry, the bone artillery which had preceded them from Vittoria, and a considerable number of cavalry, already drawn up. Having completed the ascent, they were halted, and ordered to pile their arms, from which they were commanded to move some distance. The cavalry now rode up between the Chapelgorri and their mitkpu, forming a guard to the latter. Then, for the first time, the poor fellows began to form a suspicion of what was intended against them, and several moved up to repossess themselves of their arms; but the cavalry drove them back, and they were left helpless. Espartero who commanded in person at this scene, now ordered that lots should be cast for decimation. The command was obeyed, and the unfortunate stood apart from their agonized and indignant comrades. The first ten of this devoted number were again selected, and these were inevitably to die. Among them was a fine young man, a Frenchman; and, as his comrades assert, a nephew of Lalitte. This youth, scarcely nineteen, was an object of...
