Y., Sunday Morning, April 23d, 1865 This is part of a lamentation of one mighty man over two others. In the providence of God, David was to come to the throne of Israel. He had been anointed by the prophet of the Lord. He expected that God would fulfill his word concerning him, but he had as yet no assurance, but faith in God, that he would ever be king. Saul had driven him from his sight, and hunted him from the land. For safety he had escaped to Gath, and made alliance with Achish, its king. This alliance, during its continuance, was honorable to both parties. It was kept in good faith. But it was not to continue. The Philistines would make war upon Israel, and the other lords of the Philistines, from fear of David, insisted that he should not go up with them to battle. Achish compelled David and his men to return to the city of Ziklag, in which he dwelt. After his return, the Philistines joined battle with Israel at Mount Gilboa. Israel was put to flight, and Saul and Jonathan were slain. When the messenger brought the news to Ziklag, instead of rejoicing that the death of Saul opened the way for him to the throne, David was smitten with grief. If ever he had felt hostility - there was no evidence that he had - it was now gone. His great and generous soul forgot all the injuries that he had suffered, and was overwhelmed with anguish. The great...
