Not illustrated. 1872 Excerpt: .have no cause to complain, as heretofore, of being occasionally supplied with bad impressions from old and By an ingenious process, lately devised, the drawings of the hill features, after having been photozincographed, are printed, either in black or colours, from separate hill-plates, on impressions from the one-inch outline plates. Thus, maps with the hill-features are issued promptly to the public, almost as soon as the outline plates are ready, and without waiting for the hills to be engraved. For a fuller account of this process, see Ocean Highways, June, 1873, p. 107. damaged plates. Another great advantage of the electrotype process is the facility which it affords for making alterations on the plates. To erase lines cut into the copper is a tedious and difficult process, and likely to injure the rest of the work. But a matrix shows the lines in relief, and from this it is easy to scrape off obsolete details; a duplicate plate, with the lines in intaglio, being then taken from the altered matrix, the engraver is able without difficulty to add the fresh details where needed. It will be readily understood how valuable this process is for the insertion of new railways, roads, and so forth. The hill-features for the one-inch maps are first sketched, in the field, on dry proofs from the six-inch contoured plates. Finished drawings from the field sketch are then made, on cardboard impressions from the one-inch outline plates, and furnished as guides for the...
