Excerpt: . iii. arcady in some phases of her faith. The Nineteenth Century, November, 1882. The hero in Lord Tennyson s Princess tells us that he suffered all his life from an inconvenient hereditary weakness: Waking dreams were, more or less, An old and strange affection of the house. The infirmity was a serious one, and at a critical moment of the young prince s career it entailed upon him consequences which might almost be described as humiliating. In the shock of the conflict where all was at stake--Like a flash the weird affection came; King, camp, and college turned to hollow shows. He seemed to move in old memorial tilts And, doing battle with forgotten hosts, To dream himself the shadow of a dream. Whether the Laureate be describing phenomena known to him by his own experience I cannot tell, but I myself am...
