

Selections from the early print-newspapers in colonial Calcutta, India 1780-1820: Heteroglossic print, diseases and fashion Early Newspapers in colonial India Volume 2

By Tapati Bharadwaj

Lies and Big Feet. Paperback. Condition: New. 64 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.1in. This book (the second in the series) has a selection from the early newspapers that had been printed in the early years of the British-East India Company, that is between 1780-1820, in colonial Calcutta, India. How do we read these texts that were written centuries ago and make sense of the printed texts? We cannot elide the fact that they were meant to be textually consumed by the Britishers who had arrived in India as part of the package of colonization. Reading primary texts alters how we theorize. The newspapers allow us to peek into this newly emerging world in Bengal and how socio-technological changes were taking place. We seem to think that these changes seamlessly moved into Bengal without any hiccups. We rarely do have access to these primary texts, as they are hidden in archives. What emerges is the human face of the process of British colonization and not an abstract concept of absolute power. There is a moment in the history of the English printed newspaper that emerged in Calcutta in the last two decades of the eighteenth century that defies all logic;...

Reviews

An incredibly awesome publication with perfect and lucid reasons. It can be written in simple phrases and not confusing. I am just delighted to let you know that this is actually the very best publication I actually have studied during my very own lifestyle and could be the best publication for actually.

-- Paula Gutkowski

This is the best book I have read until now. It can be filled with knowledge and wisdom. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.
