Forgotten Books, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from A Descriptive Catalogue of the Specimens in the Mortimer Museum of Archaeology and Geology at Driffield: With Illustrations Unfortunately the chalk and other fossils in the cases on the ground oor still require thoroughly examining by specialists before they can be completely labelled and classified. Mr. Mortimer has had neither time nor opportunity for this work, and has wisely taken particular care to label the specimens as to the precise locality from which they were Obtained, leaving the actual naming Of the specimens for others. By getting the various specimens together whilst the opportunity lasted, Mr. Mortimer has given all geologists reason to be grateful. The chalk quarries are not being worked at the present time to anything like the extent they were formerly consequently there is not now the Opportunity of collecting. The reason just given will account for the geological section of the Catalogue not being quite so full and detailed as would otherwise have been the case. In the archaeological section, of course, the most important and valuable part of the collections is to be found. Particulars as to how these specimens were amassed together appear in Mr. Mortimer s notes on the History of the Museum on pages 9 - 16. The specimens in the Archaeological section were obtained by Mr. R. Mortimer and his brother, the late Mr. R. Mortimer, many years ago. Being among the first in the field, and situated in a convenient centre on the Yorkshire Wolds (then one of the most prolific collecting grounds for pre-historic relics in England) thousands of int and stone implements were secured. The farm labourers for miles around were induced to Spend their spare time...
