Small Beer Press, United States, 2009. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Death was, after all, the way Henry made his living. A bookhound, Henry Sullivan buys and sells books he finds at estate auctions and library sales around Boston and often from the relatives of the recently deceased. He is in his late thirties, single, and comfortably set in his ways. But when a woman from his past, Morgan Johnson, calls to ask him to look at her late husband's books, he is drawn into the dark machinations of a family whose mixed loyalties and secret history will have fatal results. Hound, the first novel featuring Henry Sullivan, is the debut work of a longtime Boston bookseller. It is a paean to books, bookselling, and the transformative power of the printed word. Even as it evolves into a gripping murder mystery, it is also a reminder that there are still quiet corners of the world where the rhythms of life are calmer, where there is still time for reading, time for getting out for a beer with friends, time to investigate the odd details of lives lived on the edges of the book world. As the true story unfolds, its mysteries are also of the everyday sort: love found and love lost, life given and life taken away. At the center is Henry himself, with his troubled relationships and his love of old books. There is his landlady Mrs. Prowder whose death unsettles Henry's life and begins the sequence of events that overturns it. There is the secret room his friend Albert discovers while doing refuse removal, a room that reveals the story of a woman who lived and loved a century ago. And throughout the novel are those of us whose lives revolve...
