Excerpt: . . . reflection is seen, which the quick and skilful hand may then transfer. Neither the sun, nor the mist, alone, can make the rainbow; but when they are rightly joined, the gay arch spans the heavens. The invalid had gone to her long rest, and the bright flush of excitement faded not from her cheek till it was pale in death; and the spirit winged its flight, bearing this query as a burden before the throne, Why hast Thou dealt thus bitterly with Thy creatures, O my God The votaries of vice and of pleasure were subdued, awed and purified by this chastisement. Willingly would they have devoted their lives to the service of their Creator, might life but once more be a season for action, toil, and service in His cause. But what could they do now They walked the earth in hopeless agony; they...
