Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Report Hospital for Sick Children, 1907 When the silent hands that travel round the dials of the clocks in the wards of the great charity in College street had registered midnight on the last Sabbath in September, that event marked the close of the thirty-first year of the work of the Hospital for Sick Children. Year in and year out the work has gone on apace. The calendar does not register the days as they pass away more faithfully than the workers care for nigh a thousand sick little ones who find haven every year within the walls of this charity. The workers are always at their posts. - The blue-gowned nurse flitting from cot to cot with kindly word and gentle hand; the Resident in snow-white linen moving through the wards with a lingering look to see that orders are obeyed; the active staff prescribing for the little ones admitted, and discharging those whom the Hospital has restored to health; the Secretary and his staff watching business details; the Lady Superintendent and her help-meets supervising the internal economy of a building whose doors fly open when suffering childhood calls. Whether it be in the cold wrack of winter, when the snow clouds unburden and whiten the air, and the keen, cold winds whirl around the red pile in College street, or in the summer time, with its warm and welcome breezes, when God s little ones - sick and crippled - find comfort and joy either in beds on the broad balconies, or in play on the green lawns of the children s paradise. The Lakeside Home for Little Children - the watchers are...
