An environmental index might range, for example, from 0 (representing low risk of exposure) to 100 (representing a high exposure risk). Or, instead of a health risk, one or more environmental conditions might be represented (e. g. , dissolved oxygen levels as one indication of water quality). The development of an index often also involves establishing weighting factors (i. e. , giving the more important variables more weight than less important variables) as well as an equation for combining all the relevant data values into the index scale. When you develop or use indexes, related...
