St. Louisans should endow an astronomical Observatory here, deserved more attention than it seems to have received. The excellent work done by the St. Louis party in the eclipse expedition shows that we have astronomical ability here of the highest order, only it needs encouragement. I suggest first the formation of an Astronomical Society to awaken an interest in the subject, and I should be glad to receive the addresses of any who, like myself, are students of the sublime science, and would like to come together and see what can be done in the line of your excellent suggestion. The Great Telescope for Los Angeles, Cal. The following note was taken from the Aha California of Feb. 28, 1889: The great telescope which it is proposed to put upon Wilson's Peak, near Los Angeles, will perhaps not be built. Alvan Clark, who was invited there by the trustees of the University of Southern California to look over the ground and consider the practicability of the scheme, made a favorable report and named a price of less than $200,000 to erect a 40-inch lens instrument and necessary accessories. But that offer was not accepted. There is not much more than $200,000 available to spend upon the entire Observatory, and the purchase of the telescope is not more than half the expense. Mr. Clark left Los Angeles without an order, and the scheme will probably never be carried out. The Chamberlin Observatory. The building...
