THE SACRED SHIPS Out past the Highlands smoke and Autumn gold, The great gray ships on secret orders steam; Battalioned boys their dawn-lit land behold Drifting astern, like towers in a dream; They watch the havened harbor lights that gleam Speechless farewell, too tender to be told--Until within their breasts austere and bold, The former days remote and alien seem, And they, the fathers of a Day supreme. Thus, visioning their service--to a man--They grim in their stern blitheness, sail to War. Yea, while we sleep, in one night's star-lit span--Youth leaves our shores--to face the Minotaur. THE FLYING PARLIAMENT Scene. Venice, November, 1917. The piazza of San Marco. A chill air emphasizes the weather stains on arcade and colonnade. Now and then the pale sunlight glitters faintly on a bit of mosaic, but the lacy fretwork of St. Marks and the Palazzo...
