Excerpt: . . . 11 their medicines and accurately identify which parts of the protein are most important, in order to ensure optimal product safety and efficacy. One safety concern with biotechnology medicines - immunogenicity - occurs when the body does not recognize the protein being administered, triggering the immune system to produce antibodies, which are special proteins that bind to the offending protein in an attempt to neutralize it and clear it from the body. Depending on the nature of the protein administered, immunogenicity can cause the medicine to be ineffectual, or could result in adverse reactions ranging from mild to life-threatening. Because of the potential for immunogenicity, it is essential for patient safety that scientists and clinicians are able to properly, accurately, and consistently measure antibodies that develop in patients against biotechnology medicines. It has been shown that subtle or even undetectable changes in the structural properties of a biotechnology medicine can have an impact on its safety, efficacy or immunogenicity. Therefore, the laboratory-based...
