Not illustrated. 1829 Excerpt: . . . observed that most of these adjectives govern the same preposition in the two languages. With or from is translated by de. Any other preposition is generally rendered by the word corresponding to it in French. Certain adjectives which are used after the verb to be, in the third person, are followed either by the preposition de or a. As that preposition depends entirely on the manner in which the verb to be, is used, the explanation of this difficulty will be found with the remarks on this verb. Remark. A noun may be governed by two adjectives, provided they do not require different regimens; as, cet homme est utile et cher d sa famille, that man is useful and dear to his family, but it would be incorrect to say, cet homme est utile et chéri De sa famille, that man is useful and beloved by his family; because the adjective utile does not govern the preposition de. EXERCISE. Virtuous men are always worthy of esteem. A weak mind is liable to many contradictions. A heart free from care enjoys the greatest possible felicity. Voltaire was always greedy of praise, and insatiable of glory. Rousseau, endowed with a strong and fiery imagination, was subject to frequent fits of misanthropy. Your advertisement has been inserted in the paper. That man was blind in his desires, although bowed down (1) under the weight of years. He was successful in all his enterprises; but he was ungrateful towards his protectors. Logwood...
