Appreciating the demand for something on the subject of local geography, and the need of suggestions to those who are trying to teach the child how to study the world in which he lives from his own stand-point, the authors have prepared these few pages, in the hope that they may be of some assistance in this direction. By this method, it is not intended to confine the teacher to certain questions which must be answered in a particular way, but to suggest the line in which the subject may be presented to the child and the objects of study to which his attention may be called, in order that he may store up in his mind the material upon which he is to build in the future study of geography. This must not be used simply as a question book in the hands of the teacher, but must be taken and comprehended as a whole,...
