

Environmental dispatches: reflections on challenges, innovation and resilience in Asia-Pacific (Paperback)

By United Nations Environment Programme

United Nations, United States, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. This publication is a compilation of stories and reports by ten journalists from the Asia Pacific region on pressing environmental challenges and innovative actions on a broad spectrum of environmental issues - adaptation and resilience to climate change, access to and use of natural resources, mitigation of land-based pollution, solid waste management and energy efficiency, among others. It provides journalism students and individuals with a birds-eye view of the kind of articles, reports and investigative pieces that can be done to portray the state of the environment in the region, challenges and innovative actions as expressed through the voices of those at the grassroots striving to cope with environmental threats as well as within their communities.
