Historical Introduction The Marfan Syndrome: From Clinical Delineation to Mutational Characterization, a Semiautobiographic Account Victor A. McKusick In 1876, E. Williams, an ophthalmologist in Cincinnati, Ohio, described ectopia lentis in a brother and sister who were exceptionally tall and had been loosejointed from birth. Although there is a Williams syndrome that has aortic manifestations (supravalvular aortic stenosis), the name Williams was never associated with the disorder we now call Marfan syndrome. The reason is clear: Williams was geographically removed from the leading medical centers and published in the Transactions of the American Ophthalmological Society; surely his report attracted little attention and the non-ocular features were not emphasized. 2 The case report that brought the disorder to attention was provided by a prominent Parisian professor of pediatrics, Antoine Bernard-Jean Marfan (1858-1942), who did much to establish pediatrics as a specialty in France and elsewhere. He was the author of widely read textbooks and monographs on pediatric topics and was editor of Le Nourrisson for a great many years. In addition to the syndrome under discussion here, his name is often attached to Marfan's law (that immunity to pulmonary phthisis is conferred by the healing of a local tuberculous lesion) and Marfan's subxiphoid approach for aspirating fluid from the pericardial sac. (Please pardon my use of the possessive form of the eponym in these two instances!) Pictures of Marfan (Fig. This item ships from multiple locations.
