Excerpt: . 162 chapter viii. summary of preceding argument. There is nothing so revolutionary, because there is nothing so unnatural and so convulsive to society, as the strain to keep things fixed when all the world is, by the very law of its creation, in eternal progress; and the cause of all the evils in the world may be traced to that natural but most deadly error of human indolence and corruption, that our business is to preserve and not to improve. --Db. Arnold. Our task, now drawing to a close, has been a somewhat ungrateful one. The nature of the subject has compelled us to dwell chiefly on the defects of Quakerism, to disclose its weak points, to exhibit the mistakes of its defenders, and to trace the connection existing between such mistakes and its present decrepit condition. It would have been a more...
