

Uncivil Twilight: Mothers Prevent the Wrongful Execution of the Man Convicted of Murdering Their Little Loved Ones

By George Sherwood

CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 334 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.8in. Left free to kill again! Nina, 8-years-old. May 12-years-old. Sisters missing near the Baldwin Hills of Los Angeles. Their bodies were not found for months. As you learn about this shocking crime you will want someone punished to the fullest extent of the law. During the trial you will be certain the jury found the right man guilty of murder. You will be certain the judge sentenced the right man to death. In a surprise ending, you will come to believe the wrong man is about to be hanged by the neck until dead. He has only a few days left to live. From their disappearance to the fight to save the wrongfully convicted from execution, this is the story of two little girls whose mother and grandmother believed justice abandoned because the wrong man was about to be executed. As revealed the authors previous book, Colder Case, many in Los Angeles were sure the man that killed Nina and May in 1924 also killed two other young sisters and their friend in 1937. Did a wrongful conviction leave a...
