Excerpt: . . . under the United States or in any State who participated in the war or helped any enemies of the United States, but Congress by a two-thirds vote of each house had the right to pardon such people, which it did from time to time. By 1898 all those who were disqualified by this section were pardoned. In spite of these two amendments, the negroes in the South did not enjoy that freedom which the whites enjoyed. State after State managed to keep negroes from voting. In one State the whites threatened to kill all negroes who attempted to vote. In other States measures were passed which made it a crime for a negro to walk on the sidewalk used by a white man, or to be in hall or room where whites were. By these and other means the Southern States ignored amendment XIV....

Reviews

It is one of the best publications. It is definitely simplistic but exciting in the 50% of the e-book. I am very happy to let you know that this is basically the greatest publication I have ever gone through within my own existence and could be the greatest PDF for ever.

-- Dr. Anya McKenzie

Completely among the best e-books I actually have possibly read. It can be really fascinating through reading through periods of time. I am very easily able to get a pleasure of studying a written e-book.
