Excerpt from A Charge, to the Clergy of the East Riding, Delivered at the Ordinary Visitation, A. D. 1846 In noticing the improvements which have taken place in our parish Churches, it is ground of satisfaction that a resto ration of the fabric has usually contributed to an increase in the congregation. At first sight this may seem surprising. The external building is of course only subsidiary: the assembly of god s people is that house not made with hands, in which is His real presence; and their place of meeting, whether it be crypt, catacomb, or chamber, has equal promise of those superhuman visitations of His ascended humanity in which individual devotion falls short of the worship of the great congregation. Hence the ancient rule, ubi tres ibi ecclesia. Now this fact might have been supposed to furnish sufficient motive for men s assembling themselves together. What can move a man who is unaffected by the certainty Of Christ s near presence? What is more awakening than the solemn realities of death and judgment.? But man is a compound being, whom we must be content to take as we find. Enough, if by any means we may save some. Indeed, it has been matter of charge against the system of our Church, that it is too stiff and unaccommodating As early as the publication of the second book of Homilies, complaint is made of the infrequent attendance at Church, consequent on the proscription of certain attractive accessories to public worship. And the tendency of those days was so plainly towards superstition, that its suppression might be fitly pur chased by a temporary unpopularity. But however jealous our reformers of questionable forms, however...
