Stephan Malone has written a book that, if you read it carefully, will change your life and the way you look at the future. Read it in that spirit, and remember that life in so-called polar cities arrayed around the shores of an ice-free Arctic Ocean in a greenhouse-warmed world is coming down the road in the distant future. Not now, not yet. But soon. A hundred years Three hundred years Five hundred years. Soon! (scare quotes mine). James Lovelock, who in 1972 conceived of Earth's crust, climate and veneer of life as a unified self-sustaining entity, Gaia, foresees humanity in full pole-bound retreat within the next 500 to 1,000 years as areas around the tropics roast -- a scenario far outside even the worst-case projections of climate scientists. Lovelock is serious, I am serious and Stephan Malone's book is serious, too. Read it and weep for humankind. But also read it as a guide to taking action so that this nightmare scenario never has to happen. In 2007, I began setting Web sites showing designs by Taiwanese artist Deng Cheng-hong for self-sufficient Arctic communities. My intent was to conduct mere a thought experiment that might prod people out of their comfort zones on climate -- which remains, for many, even today, a someday, somewhere issue. At six going on eight billion people, Lovelock told the New York Times in an interview in 2006, the idea of any further development is almost obscene. We've got to learn how to retreat from the world that we're in. Planning a good retreat is always a good measure of generalship. The retreat, Lovelock insisted, even then, would be toward the poles. Enter the concept of polar cities for...
