Excerpt from An Address Delivered at the Semi-Centennial Celebration of the Cambridge Divinity School, July 17, 1867 The success of this movement may be taken as marking the commencement of the Divinity School; for, as we have seen, the first class graduated the next year, 1817 Of that class of six, all graduates of 1814 on the College Catalogue, two are now living, - the senior Minister-at-large in Boston, still active and indefatigable in duty, and the honored ex President, on whose mental powers the pressure of years has rested like the autumn sunshine on the fruits. The next class contained eleven, all, with the exception of him who sang the airs of Palestine, but stood up for right with a mailed hand, graduates of the College in 1815. From that time to the present, the classes have been very unequal in number. The largest, containing fourteen, left the school in 1859; the smallest, having but two, in 1825. The whole number of alumni during the fifty years has been 379, giving an average of between seven and eight to a class; of whom 98 bear against their names the funereal star in the Triennial of 1866. Of the remaining 281, about three fifths are now engaged in the Christian ministry. Others have retired from the work; some never entered upon it.
