Paperback. Condition: New. 352 pages. In 1965, the prospect of an Indiana farm boy finding love- and keeping it- while stationed in Korea was remote at best. Cultural taboos, red tape, and forbidding language barrier presented serious obstacles to romantic bliss. Such was the circumstance for Calvin Carter, a young First Lieutenant in the US Army stationed at Camp Custer that year. However, even the US Army underestimated the power of the connection Cal shared with the honorable Kwi-Suk Yi or Miss Lee, as she was called in the officers club. So begins a romance that spans two cultures, four decades, and many far flung destinations among them: Korea, the United States, and Germany. In the tender poignant Korea to California: A 45 Year Korean American Love Story, their joint autobiography shares their extraordinary story, gracefully interweaving both of their points of view. From their timid beginnings as two discovering each other amidst rough-and-tumble army personnel to their blessed present as a seasoned solid couple, this tale of two hearts offered an enriching and engaging exploration of what makes even the most improbable marriage magnificent. Their story starts in the officers club, where Cal is struck at the first sight by the beauty and dignity of Kwi-Suk. In time, his ardor is returned, as little by little, Kwi-Suk, or Miss Lee, takes note of the young soldiers actions that can only mean that he is a good man. Despite limited shared language and a humorous misap or two, Kwi-Suk and Cal soon come to understand that theirs is a love of a lifetime , and so an engagement is made. Others, however, are not so encouraging, and the sharply different climate of 1960s mainstream American society presents formidable roadblocks. The couple perseveres through it all and the rest is...
