Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Year Book of the Minnesota Society of New York, 1903-4 In earlier days before New York-3 had gamed this kind of primacy, people came here to identify themselves with the town, and in so doing to lose altogether their identity with the places from which they came. In this later stage, however where New York no longer belongs to New Yorkers but to the whole country, and where it becomes necessary for almost every large business to have its New York office, and for men of diverse or widespread interests to spend more or less of their time in New York - it has become entirely possible as well as highly proper that men should preserve their identity with the States or sections from which they come, while assuming their fair share of responsibility for the metropolis itself. Thus it has come to pass that in recent years there has been a large growth of organizations and societies recognizing the desirability of preserving the home feeling and connection. The New England Society, of course, is of venerable origin, and the Southern Society is of ever-increasing dimensions. The Ohio Society and the Pennsylvania Society have become bodies of influence, prestige, and importance. Besides these four, several other State societies have been formed, and among the most hopeful of these is the Minnesota Society, which is meant to include not merely the native sons of the splendid State at the headwaters of the Mississippi, but also all others who by virtue of years of residence and activity in Minnesota, or of other vital connection with the State, feel that it is both grateful and pleasant to avow and to...
