Excerpt from Annual Trade Projection Report to Congress: August, 1996 The us. Current account deficit was $148 billion in 1995, about the same as in 1994 but smaller as a share of gdp. A structural improvement in our external position became apparent over the course of the year, offsetting transitory external factors that served to weaken the trade and current account. A delayed recovery in Japan and slow growth in the second half of the year in Europe held back exports, while adjustment in Mexico also delayed a turnaround in the current account deficit in 1995. Notwithstanding these factors, the trade deficit peaked in the second quarter of the year and has since begun to decline. There are number of reasons for optimism that our underlying external position has improved. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
