Excerpt from As Twilight Falls, Poems Of all the Arts there is no other comparable to the Art of Literature, and the crown and flower of Literature is Poetry. Having always thought the Sonnet - although the least popular - to be the most distinguished and the most exalted of all forms of English verse, I have devoted my literary life chiefly to its study and creation. I have published more than five hundred Sonnets in the Miltonic, and the true Guittonian form - besides a few showing structural innovations - and I have written, but not published, a large number of others. The task of creating this amount of Poetry, couched in that most intricate and difficult of forms can be adequately appreciated only by those who have attempted the work, and who have succeeded in doing it. In this contribution to Sonnet Literature over five hundred themes have been treated. The Sonnets in the present volume may be considered a further contribution to my other books in which poetry in this form appears: At The Gates of Song; The Slopes of Helicon; The Fields of Dawn; Echoes of Greek Idyls; Castalian Days; The Fleeing Nymph; My Lady of Dream; Toward The Uplands; Flower and Thorn; and my Collected Sonnets.
