It grows with use, and lessens with disuse. It can be inherited and transmitted. Moderately indulged in, it is sanitarily and socially a blessing; immoderately, it becomes a curse to its victim, and a social pest. 303. It appears, then, that physiology and experience, and assuredly also the precepts of religion, offer no objection to the moderate use of the various good things which Providence has furnished for us, and among them, of the wine that maketh glad the heart of man. 304. The great lesson to be inculcated, in respect to eating as well as drinking, is temperance. In order to bring the body into the highest degree of vigour, as in the process of training for different athletic exercises, the strictest temper, once is necessary, and St. Paul uses this fact in illustration when he..
