A heavy set, thirty-year-old Mexican named Carlos Mendoza crosses the border illegally and travels to Elams Crossing in Washington States Palouse country, arriving when his cousin, Ramiro Sanchez is planning a burglary. The crafty Sanchez convinces two harvest coworkers and roommates to take part. Although Sanchez grew up in Mexico with Mendoza, he knows nothing of his cousins adult past: pimp and drug dealer, enforcer, hit man, and guerilla fighter in Guatemala. At the last minute, he secretly invites Mendoza to the farmhouse he and his buddies plan to burglarize. Things go horribly wrong that morning. Nothing turns out like the three harvest workers had planned. And Mendoza whines that it was not worth his trouble. Raised on a ranch in Colorado, the single, disarmingly attractive police detective, Brenda Tower, possess the grit and the experience for homicide that keeps her name at the top of Chief Lowerys duty roster. Finally able to break away for a vacation, Brenda is traveling with a friend to Lake Coeur dAlene when she makes a discovery. Intrigued by the circumstances surrounding the wheat...
