Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2011. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .What would you do if you suddenly realized at age 13 that you were gay? What if this occurred in 1965 in rural Alabama, one of the most unprogressive states? How do you begin to explain to your parents that you will never get married in all likelihood and never have children in an area where that is taken for granted? Ever ask yourself, how do gay people initiate contact with each other? How does a young gay man determine whether he prefers to perform a male or female sexual role? Where are your sexual outlets if you live in a small town and know no other gays in your community? Before the time of gay travel guides, how did gay men find gay bars in the cities they visited? Again in the bar setting which is where most gay men met decades ago, how do you decide whether you are passive or aggressive? Then I try to explain the hell my mother endured having her nervous breakdown in 1955. According to mother she woke up weeks after being admitted to the state hospital for the mentally ill. You don t know anyone - your family is over 200 miles away. And its 1955 in Tuscaloosa, Alabama. These are some of the many questions I asked while writing this memoir, a two year effort I began after driving home from my mothers funeral in 1999. I simply could not stand for her life to disappear without some record of her struggle and the unfair treatment she received. For much of her life the state hospital did provide adequate treatment. For a surprisingly long time the...
