MARSILIO, Italy, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: Italian . Brand New Book. The exhibition retraces a unique and unrepeatable period in the history of European and Western culture, during which the book proved itself capable of changing the world. This gave rise to the Renaissance in Venice, a vibrant city - with more than 150,000 inhabitants in the sixteenth century it was one of the richest and most densely populated on the continent - where every kind of artistic language was able to find its most effective expression in the space of just a few decades. In the sixteenth century Venice won and definitively asserted its role as hinge between East and West, moving from being a simple platform for commercial trade to a mixing pot of cultures, traditions and knowledge. Making the most of the prodigious logistical network that only a trading city like Venice could depend on, Manuzio managed to conceive of and achieve his extraordinary programme of making the great classics available to scholars and writers for the first time: those of Greek culture, from Homer to Aristotle, Sophocles, Euripides and Thucydides, and then collecting the writings in Latin of Virgil, Cicero, Horace, Ovid, Catullus, Propertius, Lucretius, Juvenal and Martial, along with those of Jews and Italians in the new vernacular literature. It was precisely thanks to Manuzio and his work with Pietro Bembo that the vernacular was asserted alongside Latin as the language of the contemporary throughout Europe, being confirmed as such by the criteria that chose Dante, Petrarch and Boccaccio as models. The circulation of this wealth of writings and ideas not only helped create a common European culture, capable of integrating the classical Greek-Roman sphere with the modern, contemporary world, but also encouraged the emergence of absolutely new subjects and motives in the figurative...
