Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .EVER since the appearance of Mr. Robert C. Witt s How to Look at Pictures, the book and its title have inspired imitations, with or without acknowledgment. How to Judge of a Picture, by Professor Van Dyke, and The Appreciation of Pictures, by Mr. Russell Sturgis, both American echoes of the original work, soon followed. Close on their heels in almost indecent haste, and also by an American, comes the English edition of Mr. Caffin s volume How to Study Pictures . It too is obviously based-title, preface, introduction, and choice of illustrations-on How to Look at Pictures. The plagiarism is naked and unashamed, and even in the three pages of bibliography no hint of the fact escapes. Professor Van Dyke s work indeed appears in the list of general authorities, but Mr. Sturgis, though a compatriot, is also ignored. So severe is the struggle for existence. Regarded as a frank imitation however the book is well enough of its kind. The author, who is the American editor of the Studio, has confined himself to considering fifty-six painters whose names he contends are pivotal ones by reason of what these artists accomplished or of their influence upon others. Adapting the parallel method he proceeds to deal with these painters in pairs, look on this picture and on this, and thus to present a survey, or bird s-eye view of the whole field of painting. One may well doubt whether so much could possibly be achieved even from the vantage seat of the Recording Angel within the limits of some few hundred pages. But the system of parading these pivotal painters before the reader in pairs like a gigantic crocodile is certainly open...
