As we all know. the interest rate is the price of the borrowed funds. the exchange rate is the price of currency trading. the inflation rate is the rate of change in currency value. Obviously. if we can not grasp the equilibrium relationship between these important financial variables. then. in order to grasp the international financial management skills on the lack of compaction theoretical basis. International financial equilibrium theory. the book began to introduce the basic knowledge of its operation of the international money market. international capital markets and foreign exchange markets. In a market economy. the money market and the capital market is the main market mechanism for allocation of financial resources; and the movement of capital across borders. foreign exchange market also need to provide a medium of exchange of currency conversion. So. the gist of the international funding management and international investment management and operating procedures of foreign exchange transactions constitute the priorities set forth in the next few chapters. Subsequently. the authors also along the main line of the financial management of...
