

A Soldier Muses: Ponderings of WWII (Paperback)

By Mr Richard E Young

Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Richard (Dick) Young was a married, father of one at the time, working at Minneapolis Moline, which had become a defense plant, supporting the WWII effort, when he entered his service time. He was trained in the armor division of the US Army at Ft. Knox, Kentucky and arrived in the war zone at Le Havre, France after extensive training on various tanks. He became a tank commander after entering Germany. While serving in war is not pleasant, Dick had one experience that forever stood out in his mind. He was in the lead tank as a commander, in a parade, where he was able to salute General Patton when Nuremberg was liberated. He often proudly displayed a photo of that parade, which is included in this book. Dick was a young man of 27 years, when he returned to his family at the end of the war. He was of German heritage, and as a young teenager, learned from his father about the properties of metal and what could be made, in the small family workshop using a metal turning lathe....
