Not illustrated. 1913 Excerpt: . . . THE BLACK-LEG DISEASE OP CABBAGE. INTRODUCTION. Wisconsin has for several years been one of the leading cabbage producing states in the country. The growing of abbages in a small way for the home and local markets by farmers and small truck growers is, of course, general, and probably occurs in every county of the state. In this case the cabbage is not the chief crop, and frequent rotation with other garden vegetables is practiced, so that as regards plant pathology this culture is not wide and early dissemination of diseases. Cabbages are grown in a more intensive way, however, in certain sections of the state. On the low, black lands along the shore of Lake Michigan, from Kenosha in the south to Green Bay in the north, winter cabbages are grown for storage purposes. This is the oldest branch of the industry in Wisconsin,...
