Aug. 1. --In spite of the restrictions of building operations throughout the Metropolitan district and the consequent more or less of a drag for building material during the first half of the season, there was recorded a pronounced rally in the demand for Portland cement, and while the price has not yet actually advanced there is a firm and rising tone to present quotations based upon the fine showing of the month of July and the exceptional prospects of growing demand in the month of August before us. July has recorded greater total sales of Portland cement than any previous year, with the volume increasing the first day of August. The call for cement for export has increased since the war agitations of Europe began and indications are that the fall and winter months will see the greatest activity that American Portland cement manufacturers...
