Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from White Pine, Vol. 8: Series of Architectural Monographs; Port Towns of Penobscot Bay The town had already been named after Lord Camden, Waldo's friend at court during the action for the grant. The place was a hamlet when the Revolution came, and the settlers must have been terribly isolated. Small British privateers, known as Shaving Mills, swept the coast and raided Camden, sometimes with success but often the honors did not go to the king's men. At this time Belfast also had been settled, not like Camden, by individuals sent out by a company, but by a group of people whose fathers fifty years before, in 1718, had fled from North Ireland to Boston, settled Londonderry, N. H., and started the Irish potato in New England with poetic justice to become one of Maine's chief industries. A man, by name John Mitchell, came to the Belfast district, saw, and returned, to bring thirty-five of his friends, who promptly bought the site and petitioned for their ancestral name to be given it. Castine, which now bears the name of a Count de Castine, a family since wiped out in France by the Revolution, was for a long time known as Bagaduce. The gentleman whose name it now bears was evidently an adventurous and enterprising soldier of fortune. He was a power with his Indian allies, and is said to have married among them. As governor or commandant of what must have been a mere trading-post and fort, he at least left his name for the place, which was later abandoned by the French, and finally resettled by the English in 1761. The French...
