One who wants to get joy of book reading especially in very less time can go for it. About The Book Sir Richard Owen, the great naturalist, was born July 20, 1804, at Lancaster, England, and received his early education at the grammar school of that town. Thence he went to Edinburgh University. In 1826 he was admitted a member of the English College of Surgeons, and in 1829 was lecturing at St. Bartholomew s Hospital, London, where he had completed his studies. His Memoir on the Pearly Nautilus, published in 1832, placed him, says Huxley, at a bound in the front rank of anatomical monographers, and for sixty-two years the flow of his contributions to scientific literature never ceased. In 1856 he was appointed to take charge of the natural history departments of the British Museum, and before long set forth views as to the inadequacy of the existing accommodation, which led ultimately to the foundation of the buildings now devoted to this purpose in South Kensington. Owen died on December 18, 1892. His great book, Comparative Anatomy and Physiology of the Vertebrates, was completed in 1868, and since Cuvier s Comparative Anatomy, is the most monumental treatise on the subject by any one man. Although much of the classification adopted by Owen has not been accepted by other zoologists, yet the work contains an immense amount of information, most of which was gained from Owen s own personal...
