Excerpt from Kindergarten Culture: Family and Kindergarten; A Complete Sketch of Froebel s System of Early Education, Adapted to American Institutions; For the Use of Mothers and Teachers Here his destiny overtook him. While waiting for an opening, he earned his bread by giving private lessons. He became acquainted With the teachers of the Model School, and was introduced by them to its principal, Gruner. I met here, he writes in his autobiography, a number of young men, who engaged in cheerful and candid conversation, of Which life and its vicissitudes soon formed the burden. I spoke frankly, gave myself as I was, as I knew myself and did not know myself. Oh, said Gruner, you must give up architecture; it is not for you. Become an educator. We need a teacher in our school; if you agree to it, you shall have the position. After some hesitation, he accepted, and educational progress had gained one of its brightest gems. That he discovered, at the same time, the long-sought road to his own happiness, is indicated in the following words: When I found myself for the first time among my young pupils, I was exceedingly happy. I felt that I had at last entered as it were, the element for which I had yearned so long. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
