Excerpt from The Hand-Book of Toronto: Containing Its Climate, Geology, Natural History, Educational Institutions, Courts of Law, Municipal Arrangements, C. C In the Summer of 1855 the proof sheets of a Guide to Toronto with Niagara Falls as its starting point - were put into my hands by a Bookseller in town, to be corrected and revised - as the Work was going through the press, the gentleman who had prepared it having left the City. In order to verify and give a few additional touches to the description, I made a special trip to the Opening scene, and having gazed and gazed again upon that endless roll of living waters surging down into the foaming abyss, I took a conveyance at the Clifton House and proceeded leisurely along through the fine old district, taking special note of Lundy s Lane, and the ancient Battle Field, on which the little village of Drummondville now quietly reposes; passed on through the village of Stamford to the summit of the Queenston Heights, - now sacred to the memory of the gallant Brock, Where, standing some 300 feet above the level of the Lake, you obtain a magnificent view of the surrounding country, and of the river now freed from its angry foam, silently pursuing its tortuous course and catch a stray glimpse of the Scarboro Heights in the distance. I then descended to the little village of Queenston, crossed the river and took steamer for Toronto. In this way the incidents necessary to fill up a few pages of a Guide Book were carefully sketched. But the work appeared to me altogether too ephemeral, and although the greater part of it was in the press,...
