Excerpt: .the headles are required to be raised at various heights from front to back--the front one being raised to a less height than the back one; and to adjust them accordingly. The end levers attached to the rocking shafts are provided with notches for the purpose of fixing the connecting rods to the treadles at proper distances, as shown in Fig. 266. The number of changes that can be made by means of tappets, as above described, is evidently very limited, but to increase the number various methods have been adopted for fixing tappets on endless bands passing over pulleys and allowing each row to strike or press against the levers as they revolve. Chains, bands, and tappets for this purpose have been applied in various ways, but they have been superseded by small machines, or shedding motions, as hereafter described. The connexions between the...
