To this end a report at the time of the first case and daily thereafter during the course of the epidemic must be made to the chief surgeon and if near a town to the local board of health. (d) Special methods of prevention consist in (i) the immunization of contacts with a serum (antidiphtheria or meningitis) (2) proper ventilation, with reduction of crowding of tents, cantonments or dugouts and (3) in all cases of possible or actual infections, bombard the enemy in his trenches with gargles, sprays and local applications. (e) Early diagnosis. This is important. Failing to do so may be the medical officer s fault. Bear in mind every epidemic has a first case. When therefore a...
