Wheelock Craig was born in Augusta, Maine, July 11, 1824. His parents were Elias Craig and Eliza Wheelock. Eleazer Wheelock, founder of Dartmouth College, was his mother's grandfather. He is recalled by those who knew him in childhood, as a sage, quick-witted boy, having a large heart and an active brain, fond of books, ready in language, his thoughts and words always seeming to run in advance of his years. Everything he did was characterized by maturity and forwardness. His mind even then gave signs of that peculiar independent force which indicates one formed to be an originator and leader. He was not physically athletic, and entered with little zest into the ordinary sports of boyhood. Nature, however, from the first had a charm for him, and he delighted in the open air. He was fond of riding and was a tolerable horseman....
