From the philosophical, we pass to the practical aspects of national churchmanship, as these disclose themselves in our own land. The moment we do this, we are confronted by a startling spectacle, -- a vision which seems to negative all hope; which looks to be, so far as any prospect of unity is concerned, a veritable apocalypse of despair. I know of no book which an intelligent American who is both a lover of his country and a believer in the teachings of Jesus Christ, is under a more solemn obligation to study than that volume of the United States Census of 1890 which deals with the statistics of religion. 1 Aside from all ecclesiastical interests, the work is worthy of attention on its own merits. Merely as a sociological achievement, it ranks with such monumental achievements as Charles Booths Enquiry into...
