These remarkable gains toward the close of the experiment were no doubt due in part to the better growing weather prevalent at that time. The earlier part of the season was very dry. Fig. 14. Modern tobacco barn on farm of Baughman Bros., Arcanum, O. Built originally for stock barn; accommodates 9 tiers of large tobacco. Total height 47 ft. It is significant that in this test the trash made a smaller proportionate gain than the wrapper grade or the wrapper and filler combined. This is in marked contrast with the results obtained by cutting out alternate plants in 1909, but perhaps the weather conditions were the most potent factor in keeping down the percentage of trash. The influence of variety may also be important in this connection, but this can only be determined by experiment. A note of explanation regarding quality as related to the last cutting of this test is demanded by the peculiar conditions obtaining at the time of harvesting, which occurred during a period of excessive rainfall. Fig. 15. Interior view of figure 14, showing arrangement of rails supporting the tobacco, also view of the portion already rilled. Vertical space between tiers about 5 ft. v The tobacco was not only cut directly after a Heavy rain but shortly after harvesting, through an unintentional failure to close a door on the curing shed, it was thoroughly drenched by a rain lasting two days, during which over seven inches of...
