Excerpt: . voyage to the cape: crossing the line September and October, 1899 Admiralty Orders were received early in September that the ship would probably leave England about the middle of the month for the China Station, to proceed there by the Suez Canal route. The distribution of the British Fleet is, of course, mainly governed by considerations of foreign policy, therefore the Admiralty, in disposing of ships, act mainly on this principle. It was just at this period that the political situation in South Africa was becoming acute in consequence of the apparently hostile attitude of the Transvaal and Orange Free State Republics towards Great Britain. To mention briefly here that the tone of the recently published despatches from both republics was producing an uneasy feeling in the country, and that war, even now at this juncture, appeared almost inevitable as the solution of the questions at issue, will suffice to explain the chain of events. Definite instructions were received on the 10th to complete with coal and stores, and embark relief crews for the destroyers Handy and Hart, besides disposable supernumeraries for the China Station. On September 14th the ship proceeded to Spithead to prepare for the voyage and undergo a short official trial to test the work just completed; and this proving satisfactory, the captain was able to report the Terrible as ready in all respects for sea. On the 18th telegraphic instructions were received that the ship was to proceed to...
