The Lytle-Tate Letters: The Correspondence of Andrew Lytle and Allen Tate

By -

University Press of Mississippi. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 450 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 1.0in. This is a remarkable collection of letters covering nearly four decades of correspondence between two of the South's foremost literary figures. The series began in 1927 when Tate invited Lytle, who was then a student at the Yale School of Drama, to visit him at his apartment at 27 Bank Street in New York. Although they were acquaintances through their involvement with the Fugitives at Vanderbilt, they had never been close friends because Lytle's association with the group occurred after Tate had left Nashville. But after Lytle's visit with Tate and his wife, Caroline Gordon, both the friendship and the correspondence grew. The letters in the long sequence of exchanges took on a different content and character during each of the decades. The early letters, those exchanged between 1927-1939, show the development of Tate and Lytle's relationship because of what they had in common—love for the South. These letters discuss plans for writing their southern biographies the two Agrarian symposia—Ill Take My Stand (1930), and Who Owns America (1936), as well as Lytle's first novel, The Long Night (1936) and Tate's work on his...
