Excerpt from The Dissector, 1845, Vol. 2 What from this barren being do we Our senses narrow, and our reason from Life is short, and truth a gem that loves to flee And all things weighed in Custom's falsest scale. W 33 Opinion an omnipotence-whose veil then Mantles the earth with darkness - until right And wrong are accidents - and men grow a little their own judgments should rid them And their free thoughts be crimes and earth have too much light. The operation of blood-letting is so associated in the minds of most men, with the practice of phlebotomy, that when a very sensible German physician, some time ago, petitioned the King of Prussia to make the employment of the lancet penal; he was laughed: at from one end of Europe to the other. This you will not wonder at, if you consider that; the multitude always think whatever, is wise right but a little reflection will teach you that there must have been a period in, the World's history, when the lancet was unknown as a remedy; and that many centuries necessarily elapsed before? It could even be imagined that loss, of blood might alleviate or cure disease. Nations, nevertheless, grew and prospered. to what daring innovator the practice of phlebotomy the Cause of the lancet, the Annals of the art leave us in ignorance; but this we know, that its introduction could only have been done during the infancy of Medicine; when remedial means were yet few; and the mode of action of remedies totally unknown. It was the invention of an unenlightened, possibly, a sanguinary age; and its continued use says but little for; the. After-discoveries of ages. or for...
