To the instance of the apostles, they answered, that they had an extraordinary calling, and so nothing thence can be inferred to prove modern bishops. ii. That Timothy and Titus were evangelists, and the first is expressly so termed; nor could they be bishops, who resided not in one diocess, but often removed from place to place. iii. That the denomination of the angels of the churches being allegorical, no firm argument can be taken thence, nor weight laid thereon. Besides, those epistles of St. John, though directed to one, were intended to the whole body of the church. They denied that the apostles were to have any successors in their office, affirming but two standing officers in the church; presbyterians and deacons. They cited Philippians i. 1, 1 Tim. iii. 8, for the proof thereof; where there...
