Excerpt from Grievings a Folly: A Comedy in Five Acts Prologue Written and Spoken by Mr. Eyre. When with a trembling heart an author sues, And begs protection for his Virgin Muse, The Prologue, counsel for the plaintiffs case, Intreats for mercy, and implores for grace. This is the poets cant, I hear you say, An old, stale trick, practisd before to-day, To make us tolerate some wretched play. Yet, if we place before some longing guest, Immortal Shakespeare s intellectual feast, So pamperd is the taste, so weak the head, Some, rather would go supperless to bed, Would rather cloy on sweets, nay, rather fast, Than come to banquet on the rich repast -At treats like those, few visitors are found, For novelty they crave the whole year round. Since then variety gives such delight, Three novelties we offer here to-night -The first, a theatre, compact and small, Where (without glasses) you may see us all; The next, a building, where we need not bawl, For, if you listen, you may hear us all; The third and last great novelty we boast, And what will...
